The riot occurred which culminated in the attack upon the home of Jones Wilson, a signer of the Declaration of Independence and an eminent lawyer. Wilson made Himself offensive by reason of his professional services to Roberts and Carlisle, who had been arranged and were afterwards executed as Tories and traitors, and also by reason of his support of certain merchants who refused to regulate their prices by the town's resolves.

Wilson's residence wis at the south-west corner of Third and Walnut Streets, Thilsdelphis, The On October 4th, 1778, a mob gathered with the intention of assulting his house and doing his bodily injury. His friends gathered around him. Including the Clymers, Mifflin, Allen ichone, Sharpe Delaney, Faul Beck, Campbell and Andrew Hobinson, there were some twenty-six all to-gether. They provided themselves with arms to defend him, but their supply of amounition was small, consisting only of that they could obtain from the arsenal at Carpenter's hall, while the mob was on its may to Wilson's house.

A deputation of citizens was sent from a meeting held at the Coffee House to prevail upon the mob to disperse. The City Troop succise their horses, and were ready to yount at a moments varning. A eccitful calm prevailed, but the sol, swell to several hundred, there of whom were armed, marched down to Chestnut Street to Second

FORD MEDGERS

ay sister, ars. Boore, has just received a lettermfrom Kingston Radley in which he spoke of having met you and your interest in things pertaining to by grandfather, faul Book. By sister has asked at to write you as suggested by Lingston.

We have, here in "os Angeles, a set of drawing room furniture and two portraits of faul Beck. One of the portraits is a small oil about two by three fect in size, and the other is a small steel engraving. Both are in a very good condition and apparently are good likenesses, as they look very much alike although done apparently several years apart. These are of value to us, of course, as family heirloons.

The dresing room furniture, however, is a different matter. This, of course, we value for family reasons, but in addition to that it is of considerable value due to its history. For several years, we have been endeavoring, through an interior decorator friend, to find a purchaser, but naturally the past three years have been difficult ones in which to find anyone the will spend considerable money on antique furniture.

In order to explain the value of the furniture, - will try briefly to give you an outline of its history. Originally it and in the palace of darie Antoinette, Fontainbleu, and when the mob sacked the palace, they sold the furniture and furnishings to the public. The dreating room furniture, rugs and drepories were sold to the Carryis de Cree Rujo. Re afterwards became Einister from Spain to this country, and while he stayed in Philadelphia, he rented a house of Paul Deck, furnishing the house, in part, with this French furniture. You may recall that the Larguis married, while in this country, a Philadelphia girl, Sally ScCain, and I have seen her portrait standing by, or sitting upon one of these very French chairs. Then the Marquis left Philadelphia, he sold the furniture, rugs and draperies to faul Beck. It has remained in our family ever since in constant use. Unfortunately, due to lack of appreciation of old things in those days, the draperies were first dyed and then ap-parently used up and thrown away. At any rate, there is nothing left of either the draperies or the rug, so far as I know. Also the original brocade covaring of the furniture was removed and none of it preserved. By elder sister, Lary Este, has described the brocade - this ground with the fleur de lis woven in it and decorsted with a center senel of the arms of France and Austria entained. However, even with the original covering gone and the wood painted, it takes an expert but a minute to ascertain the anti-ulty of the construction. particularly when they examine the underlying upholstery. At the present time, the furniture consists of a large sofa, three ers choirs and two or three armless chairs. Another are chair and a straight chair were sold to a friend some time ago, but his widow is willing to sell them back to us in order to complete the set, should it ever be desirable to do so. As to the condition of the furniture, it is, of course, in need of covering and the wood refinished. By daughter has had one of the arm chairs refinished, and if I can possibly do so, I will have a snap-shot of it made and send it to you. The underneath upholstery is in perfect condition after nearly one hundred and fifty years of constant use, with the exception of one place in the sofe where the seat has very slightly sagged. It is a pity we live so far apart as " should enjoy showing you the portraits and furniture as well as several other interesting heirlooms we have here. However, you may come to California some day, and, if so, I hope to have the pleasure of meeting you.

Very truly yours,

(Signed) Susan G. Seabury.

Mrs. Samuel Seabury, 940 Crenshaw Boulevard, Los Angeles, Calif.

Note: Mrs. Laird, later, bought this furniture.

Beck, Jr., Paul (Estate), 11,000,000.

On the SEnd of December, 1844, Mr. Beck died at his residence, on darket street, showe fighth, worth side, aged about 34 yerrs. The fine old-fashioned house, on the door of which the name of "Seck" appeared on a brass plate, at least a foot in width, will be remembered by our elder citizens. It was approached by marble sters, which went up sideways, which style lately seems to have had a revival in this city. The doorway and window frames were in the most respectable feshon of sixty or seventy years ago. The house in later days was slaays closed, windows with blinds down, and everything about it very quiet. The building and lot ran bock towards ; court, which opened to Filbert Street. The houses here wore rather superior to those in such by mays at that time, and were inhabited by very respect ble acrehants and tradespon. Beck's house looked out upon this court, and had a full vies of Filbert Street. The old mansion and the court have disappeared and the sites occupied by them have become a part of the great dry goods establishment of Strawbridge and Clothier. Mr. Beck was the son of Paulus Julian Hichaelis Book, an emigrant from Neuremberg, in Franconia, who came to Philadelphia in August, 1752. He had been an apprentice to a cloth merchant, and the family was once of affluence, but had been reduced by mercantile misfortunes. Faul Beck, Jr. was the third child, and was born in Philadelphis, and placed as an apprentice, at the age of 14 years, with Willies Sheaff, a vine merchant and grocer, at the southeast corner of Fifth and 1 rket Streets. When the Mar of the Revolution broke out, young Paul Peck, Jr. was not sore than 15 years old. At the age of 18, any led in Pennsylv-nia was liable in those days to be drifted into the militia, and when but a boy, he was called up to do milit ry duty in a city battalion, in which he served in Pottstown, Lancaster, Reading and other places. In 1785, according to the Philadelphia Directory, Faul Beck was in business es a merchant at Erract Street wharf. In 1731, he was a grocer at 11 South Water Street. He flourished greatly at this Slace, one increased his tarehouse room by the addition of three stores. In 1735, he was in partnership with James Caldwell, a connection which lasted only too years, in consequence of the death of the letter, in 1787. After book's removal to ther street, he went into pertnership with Isaac Harvey. The firs of Beck and Avery was in business for many years. After in. Hervey retired, Yeal Bees continued the business on his own account nearly up to the time of his death.

improvement on the Delaware.

It was not so much as a merchant but as a citizen that dr. Heck was entitled to respect and confidence. Whilst he was prosperous and active in the menagement of his own affairs, he had time and inclination to give some of his work and wisdow for the benefit of the public. He was appointed, at an early period in his life, warden of the port of "hilsdelphic, in the discharge of which duty it was evident to him, as well as to others who examined the suffect, that the accomodations for vessels engaged in concerce and for the people generally, were most wretched. At the early day when he went into business, the wharves of Philadelphia ziong the river front, except at the ends of the streets, were private property. Every owner could do what he pleased with thes. The place of entrenes was from Water Street, but the starves mere built upon in whatever manner the owners thought proper. Therewere buildings upon them out to the very edge of the tide, in some places. The docks were irregular, so that it was almost . ispossible to get from one where to mother without going around distances or back into "ater street, the fonces being frequently act up so as to enclose each man's property. This was not the clan of Millian Fonn. In his first arrangement of the city, it was his intention that the "shole space under the bank," or exst of Front Street, should be a broad, fine quay from Vine to South street, opened at all times for passage, and affording room andcomfort to vessels. Unfortunately, Penn's necessities were such that after his first return to England, his Commissioners were forced to sell what were called the bank lots, extending from the east side of Front Street to the Delaware. Hey gave full title to esch purchaser to low mater mark. Afterwards, as a sort of compromise, and because there could have been no convenient use of the wherver, Aing Street, afterwards called Water Street, was isid out at a distance of forty feet east of Front Street. This so called accomposition was not equal to the need. Water Street was very nerrow; it was usually thronged with drays and trucks, and passage along it was difficult. In addition to the other disconforts, the wherves, in consequence of their condition, were nurseries of pestilential disease. In 1810, the Posrd of Health expressed strong opinions in relation to the yellow fever, then reging in the city, and pronounces the entire water front to be a nuisence. The fever had its home in the part of the city near the Deleware, and all houses, stores, etc., in that section, were in unhealthy condition. At this time, Faul Beck, Jr. brought his plan for the improvement of the lelavere front, a plan which in ister years was prefected by the laying out of Delaware Avenue, a sessure which could not have succeeded had it not been for the beneficent essistance of Stephen Girare, ander the provisions of his ill. Fr. beek proposed that all the houses on the cast side of Front street, along Water Street, and on the pherves should be jurchased by the public and to m down. A call, with from rillings, on the cost line of Front Street, wes suggested, which could give to the people a free view of the Delatare. Beneath It we recommended that store-bouses, not wore then two stores high, the roofs of shich should not be more then three or four feet above the street surface of Front street, should be built. The mare to be forty feet dide by one numbrou feet lang, oivided for convenience into four parts, with an alley running through each block, with New Tater Street on the west of them, and on avenue on the east, the line of which in no part should be less then seventy-five fect from the river, it was suggested that this improvement would cost $3,651,000. Of course such a plan, which advocated violent dealing with the property of individuals, met with great opposition. Mr. Back was an owner of Water Streat and wherf properties hitself, but he willingly ascented to secrifice his interests for the public good. Strange to say one of the strongest opponents of the plan and Stephen Girard, the sale and who eleven years afterwards left a large amount of money to the city of Philadelphia to consumate such an improvement, the only difference being that leck proposed to take the buildings off of all the properties, whilst Girard directed that as much money should be used as was necessary to lay out Delaware Avenue on straight lines, and generally increase the midth of meter street, The reason of Girard's early opposition must have been a sup osed interference with his individual interests. Then he came to consider how his wast worlth should be left, he attained a clearer and a larger view. Wr. Beck mus on carly friend of the building of a means of communication between the navigable saters of the Delaware and Chesapense Enys, which finally culminated in the founding of the belavare and thesepeake Canal Company. In was a large subscriber for the stock of the company and advocated that the passage ry should be sufficiently deep and wide to admit sailing vessels of large draught and tonnage, such as navigate the rivers and bays. Pe was one of the founders of the Pennsylvenia Academy of Fine sits, to which he bequeathed a number of his pictur s. He was a contributor to the Pennsylvania distorical Society; the Acprentices! Library, and the Mercantile Library Companies. In assisting institutions of philanthrophy, he was ever prompt and generous. For some years, he was treasurer of Christ Church Respitel. He was benefactor and for a time president of the Fennsylvania Institution for the Leef and Lumb. He was particularly devotes to the American Sund y School Union, and was vice president and treasurer during a course of eighteen years. "e gave flo,000. and a lot of ground for the erection of a Methodist piscopal Church on Wathering Etreet, above Sixth Street, now known as St. Paul's. He also created, at his own expense, a public School house, in the same neighborhood, which is even yet called the ral took school House, and is under control of the Philadel FI -oelety for the support of therity cohools. . By his will, he left large legacies for benevolent purposes. The writer of the panchlet from which we quote, estimated his to be Forth about $1,000,000. It turned out to be a million and a 'Earter.

Beck's Blat Lover. (deae reference.)

Although ir. Book had been brought u. to mercentile business entirely, his petriotism urged him to go into the business of manufacturing shot. The embargo had ruined converce and the hope of the United States lay in encouraging home manufacturers. Alcost simultaneously the erection of too shot factories were rossended in 1806. In Southwark, Bishop and Sharp created a shot tower on the lines of the present Carpenter Street, between senson and Front, the corner stone of which was laid on the Fourth of July of that year, about the sme time, Faul Ecck, Jr. loid the found tion of his shot tower, north of Irch Street, and between Schuylkill Front (Trenty-second) and Schuylkill second (Inenty-first) street. The torer was of a source shape, tall and high, and was for a long time a landmark which could be seen for a great distance from both sides of the Schaylkill. At this establishment, Leck, at one time, made from eight to ten tons of shot per day, "the quality not inferior to the British, and two collars per hundred weight cheaper." The building stood long after the death of Br. Seck. The site is now partly peoupied by lower Street, between Arch and Cherry Streets. Er. Beck was trice married. "is first wife was margoret warker, of Stedish descent. His second was hary, daughter of Job Marvey, of Delaware, a member of the Society of Friends. The children that survived him were Henry faul Dock and Dr. Charles Frederick Lock. A daughter had married John Goddard, merchant, from whom came Dr. Faul Leck Goddard, in his time : well-knorn and successful modical man, and the Rev. citizens, though hisself only mideteen years of see at that time, she assumbled to protect the mansion of the Silson, afterwards one of the fremers and signers of the Constitution of the United distes, when it was attacked by a mob. (An interesting account of this event appears in volume six of "Lives of the Signers of the feelsestion of Independence," Edition 1824.) He treasured up, and was fond of relating many indicents connected with the Revolutionary ere, and that which immediately succeeded it, when the newly established Federal Government was seated in this city. When, in later years, the second war with Great Britain occurred, he had lost none of his patriotic deel, for though his age and peaceful pursuits no longer justified its exercise, in a similar manner, he came forward at once to support the efforts of the Government, and subscribed seventy-five thousand dollars to the loans it was procuring in order to carry on the war.

At the close of the Bevolution, and shortly after he came of age, be entered upon mercantile-life, which he continued afterwords aninterruptedly to pursue. From documents, it access he united misself in partnership with Ir. ones Caldwell, which was terminated by the dects of thet gentleman in 1737. From that period down to the year 134/, when he died, his account books afford an ample opportunity of tracing the origin and progress of his success, and exhibit a reastable picture of steady increase in prosperity and worlth. Possessing, ot the close of the first year in which he was thus engaged, a property estimated by him at no more than four thousand younds in the currency of the State, his fortune has gradually increased in 1797 to sixty thousand pounds and ucwards, and at his death in the year 1844, it exceeded one million and a quarter of dollars. It was not core in this large augmentation of his property that his industry, integrity and ability were shown, then in the regularly progressive accumulation exhibiting his continued perseverance and skill in the line of life he had selected in his youth, and in the uniform increase of his standing among his fellow citizens as a liberal merchant, not only alive to the honoralle prosecution of his own business, but uniting with it a name and patrictic interest in the mercantile prosperity of -hiladelphia.

Thrage averse to public office, he accepted and held, for a long time, the next of Erden of the Fort of Hild elable, which as tendered to him, with-out solicitation, by the Governor of the State, and, in the exercise of its duties, he was, at all times, most attentive and industrious, corefully examining and promoting every mones which contributed to preserve or extend the facilities of the port and result of commerce. (The Board of Bealth, Jaly State, adopted, at their meeting, the following resultions to easily of the good energies have be presented to and here, issue, the total of this fourt be presented to and here, istron, for the good energies he his set in covering his there with a substantial povement, a measure at less called for by an onlight and self-interest, then the promotion of the public calfore, and which, if polled generally, promises to produce the last salutary consequences." it may not, however, be incorrepriate to mention a circumstance, in this connection, which cisplayed his conscientious avoidance of everything that might seen to connect his public duty with his private interest. seing desirous to extend some wharves belonging to himself farther towards the channel of the river, and the assent of the board of fordens being re-(uired, he at once tendered his resignation of his own consistion to take effect before his application should be considered. Though his proferred resignation was not sent to the Dovernor by the Mester Larden, yet he did not stiend any meeting of the Board of Mardens till the subject ha had referred to was finally dispose of. Another subject which elicted his active exertion was the improvement of the front of the city facing the river Leleware. It is well known that the original plan of William i enn provided for a broad and noble quay, occupying the entire space from the western side of Front Street, and extending from one extremity of the city to the other. Thhis design was at first partially, and, afterwards, entirely disregarded, so that, in the space which the wise founder intended especially to leave open the most irregular and closely built portion of the city had come to exist. In the pestilences which occasionally occurred, it was the profilic seat of disease, and to the general trade of the part it presented a most serious obstacle.

Not downted by the prejudices and accumulated interests of more than a century's occupation, ir. Beek determined to make an effort to restore the original design of William Penn. Re obtained plans for the alteration, and estimates of its cost. He wrote and published (Reprinted in the collections of the historical society of Pennsylvania, Vol. 1, 1852, Page 382, with the following note: "The papphlet which is here reprinted, appears originally in the year 1800, and was written by the late Faul Beck, or. The letter from Mr. Sirard, which is added to it, is published for the first time. Er. Sirard provided in his will for improving Water Street and the river front, in a way inferior, it must be admitted, to the mode here proposed."), a clear exposition of its utility and feasibility, and he proceeded in enlisting the favorable co-operation of many prominent citizens, including communications from medical scoleties, the word of Realth, and a committee of citizens appointed to consider the plan.

It encountered opposition, however, from several influential quarters, but especially from Stephen Girard, the addressed his a letter, which was pullished, declaring that he "was strongly opposed to the execution of his plan." He found himself at hist reluctantly obliged to abandom it. The provisions of the direct's will made at a later date, by which he appropriated, among his other hoble donations to Philedelphia, no less than half a million of collars to improve the avenue along the Delaware, and to miden and straighten Water Street, are a proof that, to a considerable extent, he brought himself subsequently to concur in the opinions of the Beek, and although he was not in favor of the particular plan proposed by him, yet he was satisfied of the importance of such isprovements, to secure the herith and promote the porvenience of the community. The next subject connected with the general benefit of the city. to which Mr Deck turned his attention, was fortunately espried through with success. From an early day, the importance to the converce of Fhiledelphic of a navigable water communication from the Delaware to the Chesapoele Bay had been recognized. It had twice been undertaken; the first time previous to the Revolutionary tar, when surveys, plans and estimates for several routes had been made; and a second time at the beginning of the present contary, when the work was actually commenced, and some progress made. though this was soon stopped, from inability to raise a sufficient capital. In the year 1821, a strong disposition arose among merchants of Philadelphia to make a third effort to accomplish this important object. Mr. Beck at once enlisted in it with characteristic zeal. He united in public addresses and in private appeals to the citizens; he subscribed liberally himself, and obtained large contributions from others; he became one of the managers, and devoted himself to the work regardless of the interference with his own personal occupations. -t w s greatly, if not mainly due to his exertions, while he filled this office, that the canal was executed on the bold plan which now makes it one of our most remarkable works of internal improvement, that of a deep cutting through the elevated sumit, and a cepacity sufficiently deep and side to admit sailing vessels of large draught and tonnage such as navigate the bays, and even the ocean. In the character of a successful and enterprising merchant, and an active, influential and public-spirited citizen, Mr. Deck added that of a friend and promoter of art and literature, and more especially of a wise and generous philanthropist. Throughout his life, he displayed a taste and fondness for pictur s, of which he had a considerable and valuable collection. He was smong the founders and early friends of the Pennsylvania Academy of time free. He becueathed to that institution a number of his plotures, and he always readily extended generous sympothy and sid t rising artists. Anong his letters, one was found, after his de the written to him in 1811, by a youthful painter, "hose subservent and just reputation proves the correctness of ir. Beck's foresight. The language of the author is so touching, when taken in connection with his present fame, as to justify its insertion. Li as written to in. Beck, by r. charles . leslie, when still culte a youth, he first visited Europe, to cultivate, by study and instruction there, the genius which then seemed to give the promise, since realised, of his great future success. "Plasse permit me he writes to Ar. Beck, "on my departure for ingland, to leave my best thanks with you, as the only testimonal which it is at present in my power to give of the deep gratitude with which my heart is penetrated, for yourkind liberality in patronizing a youth unknown to fortune - perhaps almost unicion to you, "het er ay future days be passed in sunshine, on the pina cle of fame, or exang the fogs in the vale of obscurity, I shall sivey. retrin a lively remembrance of your early and efficient patronage." To many literary institutions, but especially to the flatorical Society, and the apprentices! and dercantile Library Com unics, he was a liberal contributor, and the claims and ments of the meritorious youthful author, as of the youthful artist, never failed to secure from him a kindly response. It was, however, to institutions of philanthropy that his energies were most actively devoted, and his assistance generously and liberally given. of the numerous institutions of this hind which confer so much honor on Philadelphia, it is perhaps inpossible to name one of which he was not the efficient petron and friend. For services rendered as freesurer of christ Church Bosnital, Mr. Beck received, April 23rd, 1827, the thanks of the Vestry of the United Churches - Christ hurch, it. Poter's and St. Jame's. Throughout his life, he devotes his time she servic s to them, and was always a prompt and abundant contributor. It his death, his bequests were large in the aggregate and widely extended. Ho difference of religious opinion affected or governed his philenthropy. Mough he was a sealous, stichtire and conscientious vorshipper in the Protostint Episcopal Church, and villingly united to advance and sustain its influence, yet his tolerant platy was always ready to befriend the roligious efforts of those of other persuasions. From among many in tances of this enlightened spirit, which the history of His life affords, one mor be mantioned, that of his prompt donation of ten thousand collers and a lot of ground for the erection of a lethodist Triscopal Church in the district of Hoyanensing, which he had learned it ass the desire of a number of that persuasion to establish. "Frequently do me supplicate our Heavenly Father," seid the pastor and congregation, on receiving his generous gift, "to shower down upon you and your family the blessings of the new and everlasting covenant, humbly trusting that you may be spared many years to witness the great amount of rood which shall be done by the sound conversion of precious, incostal souls, within the wells and under the roof reised by your bounty." He erocted, at his own expense, a large and commodious school in the suce neighborhood, and gave it to the society for the support of charity schools, prescribing only the conditions that it should be maintained in good order, and that no exception or preference should be shown in preard to the religious persuasion of the colligner. in the Institution of the Deaf and Durb, he was liberal the the institution of the bead and the resident. To the parameter, and its active are efficient resident. To the supporction of the wity of Phile clokic, he secured two annuities, each of five hundred dollars, to be applied forever to the purchase of fuel and the supply of sorp to the poor. But especially to an institution of fidely diffused and judicious beheficence was he particularly devoted - the American Sunday school Union. As early as the year 1791, a "First day or Sunday School Society," had been ostablished in Phil: clohie, and those who united in the enterprise were of different denominations of Christians. In 1817, a more extended society was formed, with a view to promote the establishment of punday Schools, not in the city only, but in the villages in the country. Ine operation and influence, however, of these associations was guite local, but they suggested the idea to the picus men who were united to then, that a new and more general organization might formed to concentrate the efforts of wunday school societics throughout the United States, to disseminate useful information, to supply terchers and missionaries, and to circulate march and religious publications in every part of the land. The grand principle of this Union as, that, as the essential truths of Protestant Christianity are held in componenty all evangelical denominations, such as Presbyterians, Destists, Congregationalists, Episcopalians, Lutherans and others, religious peoris, shalever might be their particular crees, might Tell unite to sevence them; and that missions and agencies might is established, and books might be supplied from a common fund. and under a united organization, which would secure the confidence of all. In the year 1824, this excellent system was undertaken in bilecelchis, and resulted in the establishment of the American Sunday School Union. While the beneficient object applealed strongly to the charitable sensibilities of -r. Beck, its plan of liberal religious toleration, harsony and co-operation wes particularly in accordance with his own views of Uhristian duty. He entered realously into it. He becaue at once an active manager, and subsequently one of its vice-presidents. he was a large contributor to its pecuniary means during his lifetime, and by his will. Very soon after its establishment, he consented to be its Breasurer, which post he continued to hold for eighteen years. In addition to his general duties, as a Manager and Vice-President, he superintended its finance with particular ability, and before certh terminated his philanthropic duty, he had the satisfaction to see its revenue so largely increased as to diffuse its missions, Its schools, its libraries, and its books to an extent for beyond what his sanguine hopes had contemplated then he entered upon the benevolent enterprise. It may sell be supposed that his associates mourned his loss. "For eighteen years," hey stid in a letter to his son, "he was associated with us in the management of the Smion, and during all that period, until his unavoidable retirement from active life, he was never absent from his place, nor delayed tak. discharge of any of its claims." the person 1 habits of wr. beek sere simple and unostantations; nor cid they undergo may change in this respect, then fortune had placed his toon the realthiest of the citizens of Thil Gallhia. Dis life was covoted from first to last to his faily; his basiness -and liberel philanthropic undertakings. he was take married - at first to margaret rerer, a descendant of the Swansons, Sweelsh settlers provious to the arrival of willi m furn; and aftersards to ----, deughter of Job Hervey, (His gr adfather had maigrated,

Of his children, by these merriages, but too survived his, Heary Fuul Beck and Dr. Charles Frederick Beck. (Dr. Beck died at Abme, Itsly, February 13th, 1859; after a brief illness, having left shilad loki in the month of June preceeding, for the recovery of his health. Dr. Reck had previously visited Jurope, after the completion of collegiate and medical studies, and where his tastes for scientific pursuits were much improved. He left no children.) If his surviving grand-children, two reside in shilsdelphis - br. Paul F. Boddard, and the Rev. Aingston wodcard - both being of distinguiched professional reputation. (Other descendants by his first marriage are the children of Daniel Lammot, a gentleman of liber 1 cducation, and distinguished for commercial and industrial purcuits ----the children of Nathaniel F. Millians, a Baltizore cerchant, and one of the gallant defenders of Fort . cienry, durias the last ar vite Great Britain, and the children of Millia C. Beer, of Philocelphia.)

In the year 1847, the health of ir. been legen to fill, so as to oblige his to withdree from the public social intercourse which, until then, he had cultivated. He gridually declined during the the succeeding years, and finally expired, at his residence in darket street, on the Wand day of Secember, 1844. His bedy was at first deposited in Dt. raul's Church, and subsequently removed to wouth Laurel Hill Cometery, where his surviving sons have placed the remains of their parents. He had directed that the corrections of his interment should be conducted in the plainest manner, and that, in lieu of the expenditures usual on such occasions, the sum of three hundred dollars should be distributed among the poor, but charged, by his executors, as "fineral expense." A large concourse of persons, however, were present, enxious to pay the last tribute of respect to a fellow-citisen whom most of them had long known and truly esteemed.

Te have spoken of another tomer - the one crected by seck. This seems to have come into existence almost simulaneously with Spark's. At was situated between Arch and Kree Streets and the Schuylkill Front and Second Street, not far from the river. Te had occasion incidently to refer to it yesterday in our talk over the "Liens" of thildelphie in 1829. This structure as built by the "Liens" of thildelphie in 1829. This structure as built by the seck, Jr., as one of the many over tions of his varied mercantile career. It was a source to er, thirty feet is rimeter at the bise, and thenty-the feet at the subject of supplying shot at the rate of from three to five long a day. For more than a generation leek was conspicious among those childelphians shot it used to be the phrale to describe as "Architects of their own fortunes." Descended of German stock, he had all the best commercial habits of that race in connection . with find tastes and the ense of benevolance. To apprentices in t's old-time counting rooms, it was the custom to point to him as an illustration of what youth might become who was attentive to his permenship, sober and punctual in his habits and mindful of the interests of his employer. Indeed, he was a perfect type of the merchants whose dilligence in orking all day long and whose close watchfulness of their credit in paying their bills have the city a more than ordinary reputation for the standard of its mercantile integrity. He long lived in a handsome, three-story brick mansion on the north side of Aarket Street, above Eighth, the lot entending to Filbert Street. Abrahom Ritter, indescribing his appearance, says that he "was rather small of stature, very nest in person, of a mild, modest and benevolent countance marked by a bearded wart near his chin - rather interesting then otherwise a gentlemen in manner and active in business matters." He was perhaps the first of the millionsires of Fhiladelphia, who employed in philanthropy during their life time portion of their incomes. A contemporary of Girard and Ridgway, his fortune was frequently compared with theirs, although it was probably never more than half of Aldgway's, which was less than half of Girard's. When he died in 1844, his estate was estimated at upwards of a million and a quarter dollars. It was probably not than equalled by more than helf a dozen fortunes in Philadelphia. Indeed, proportionately to the general wealth and valuations, it was e. uivalent to an estate of ten million dollars to-day.

One of the most noted of the public undertakings in which Faul Beck ms engaged was his attempt to restore the Belawere front of Philadelthi to the design contemplated by Penn in laying out the city. This projected improvement, which was to extend from Vine to Spruce Streets, was conceived on a scale worthy of the wisdom of a great and farsighted merchant. It called for the vacation of all the property from the east side of Front Street to the river, the erection of a retaining wall on the street line, capped with an iron railing, the laying out of a new Teter Street on the castern side of the vall, the construction of new bulldings in uniform blacks, each forty by one hundred fect, on the vacated ground and each block subdivided into four store houses with a cartyny hetween each, with the Delaware Avenue front set back seventy-five feet. beck's agitation of this elaborate scheme was an episode of the city's life. It did much to stimulate the spirit of improvement. But he was compelled to abandon the plan because of the cry that it would cost three and a half million collars and because the powerful influence Stephen Girard, with all his Weter Street connections, mas thrown against it. It probably induced Sirard, however, to provide in his till for that videning and improvement of Delaware Lyonac and the river front which the Board of Wity Trusts has lately been patting into effect. · · ·

Taul Beck's Shot Tower From the West Link of the schuylkill, Telow Frimount.

From a print by Thomas Eirch, in 1816.

This picture of the shot tower of roul Beck, Jr., is from a rare and unusual print engraved from a drawing by thomas Dirch, who with his father, William Airch, made pictures of many of the institutions an landmarks of thiladelphia as they at eared about the beginning of the 19th Century. This picture are made about the year 1816, and shows the east bank of the river as viewed from below Wernwag's Bridge at Fairmount. It will be noticed that the shot tower was the tallest object in the landscape, and its height, 166 feet, was regarded as a thing of wonder in those times.

Then Sparsely Settled.

The direction in which the tower is viewed is shorn as sparsely settled, although the same location today is entirely built up and is the site of many manufacturing plants. It was near the shot to er that the famous Tammany Wigwam was for many yours the meets of many a pilgrimage among the faithful of the old Tammany Society on any tay, and of Jackson Democrats in the olden times on other patrictic occasions. The tower was one of the two which were begun and finished about the same time the embargo was proclaimed, and during the War of 1818 both establishments were busy furnishing shot for the American troops. The shot towers were viewed as patrictic enterprises quite as much as conmercial businesses, and in a sense they were, for before their sovent shot had to be imported.

Book's shot tower was not as well built as that of sperks and lithop, which still stands in Carpenter Street, hear Front. Meitier was it so interesting as an engineering fest as the latter. "I could appear that it had been arected in opposition to the one in coutheark, for it was hurriedly put up, and was constructed mainly of word, while the one in the later part of the city was carefully planned and built of brick. Both more the wonder and admiration of all visitors to the city, and for some time after their erection attracted accenturous pecestrians on a platsant Sunday afternoon. The Beck tower, which stope on Cand alreet, show are the the outhwark to ar is round. I was removed about the middle of the last century. A description of the place in 1930 notes that its daily capacity was five tons of finished shot per day.

An Enterprising Citizen.

is the establishment of one of the formost merchants of shilad lohia, Seck's shot tover was only one of the numerous enterprises in which its owner indulged. Paul Beck, Jr. was one of the most enterprising merchants who are now remembered in the annels of the city's commerce. He was something more than a marchant, however, and nearly every charteble or philanthropic movement in his time see not regarded as worthy of encouragement unless he put his name to it as subscriber or manager. The early efforts to make education free end of the greatest benefit to the poor in this city had Paul Beck as one of their strongest supporters. There still remains in the southern section of the city a memorial to his championship in the Beck School. -Became a Millionaire. Apprenticed to William Sheaff, a lime merchant, Paul Beck left his suployment upon the opening of the Revolution, and enrolled himself as a member of a local company of infantry. At the close of the war, he engaged in business with a partner, and, as prosperity always sat upon his dour-step, at his death he was said to have been worth more than a sillion dollars - a more imposing amount in 1844 than it is today. Imong his early schemes for local improvement was a plan for a noble quay on the Delaware River front. His design a s not approved, however, but is said to have inspired the scheme of Girard for the widening and improving of Lelaware Avenue, which a fer years ago was accomplished mainly from the accumulations of the fund left by Girard for the purpose. Ar. Beck also was the guiding spirit which connected the Lelaware River with . the Chesapeake Bay by means of a canal. He was one of the founders of the Academy of Fine Arts, and the Institution for the leaf and Lumb, and the American Sunday School Union also are proud to link his name with their beginnings.

 "Beltimore, Maryland, April 9th, 1861.
Many of my young relatives, residing in different States remote from se, some of whom I have never seen, have requested that 4 would furnish a concise statement of my early days, brought down to the present period. I was the tenth and last child of William and Mertha Willians, born in the town of Brooklyn, Windham County, Connecticut, on the 30th of recember, 1779, losing my father before I was quite six years old; I was under the special care and devoted attention of an affectionate mother, with whom I continued until the autumn of 1795, when, against my wishes, but at the carnest desire of my mother, I consented to leave my fond home, and went to Roxbury, to be instructed in a better school than Brooklyn afforded, and become one of the family of my Uncle Stephen Williams, a brother Sin Decome one of the lamity of my unche Decomer stitutes, a provide of my mother. I remained in Rorbury until April, 1795, when - seiled in the schooner Federal George, Captain Arnold, for Baltimore, to live with my oldest brother, Joseph, in partnership with Jonathon F.
 Low, Convission Merchants, of Sowly's wherf. I continued with them until the month of January, 1801 being then twenty-one years old, I went on a visit to Brooklyn to see my mother, whom I had not seen for six years. After remaining with her for several months, I went to Providence, Roxbury and Boston, to see my other friends, and spiled from thence. in the summer of the same year, for Bultimore.
On my arrival. I found my brother closing up his business, and propering to remove to Augusta County, Virginia, to establish iron works: he was cestrous I should accompany him, which I declined. being without amployment, and but little money, I was offered a situation in the Commission Store of Benjamin and George Williams, which I gladly accepted. I remained with them four years on a selary of $720.00 per annus. After poying my board and clothing myself, I saved one thousand dollars, added to which I bortowed four thousand five hundred collars, this gave me a capital to commence the Convision business in the year 1808. By close attention and strict economy my business so increased, 4 decided to get married, and in the month of "ovember, 1808, I was married to Elizabeth Redman Beck, the source of her Book In at this matrice of strange of the coughter of Paul Beck, Jr. of Philedelphia, by whom I had siz children, two died in infancy. Four lived to grow up, and three of the four were married. My wife died on the 18th December, 1826, subsequently I lost three of my children, leaving only one. Increasing years, and not in robust health, I deemed it most prudent to spend the residue of my life in a single state. During my long residence in deryland, sixty-six years, - have paid strict attention to my orn concerns, and in no instance interferred with the rights of others, by which means. I have avoided all personal (uarrels, and scintained av on crinions on religious and political subjects, and having always a large charity for those differing from me. 1 have had much reason to feel grateful to my friends and felloweitizens for the kindness received, and the confidence reposed in me. Inring my residence in this City. I have been made, without solicitation on my part, one of the danagers for building Washington

Banks, one Insurance Company, a Commissioner in the State of Maryland Lotteries, one of the Council to the Governor for three successive years, a Local Ap. raiser of Merchandises at the Sustem Eouse, and Collector of the Port of Baltimore. In each and all of the offices, I endeavored to discharge my duty faithfully, promptly, and obligingly, and closed up my accounts without using one coller of the public money to which I was not entitled. this hastily written sketch made after I had reached eight one years, with a mind clear and calm, and making all due allowances for errors or judgment, I do not see many acts + would wish to change, if I had the power to alter them. Euring my life from early boyhood, I have always had a great respect for religion, and for keeping the Sabbath day from all kinds of business, and attending some place of public worship when my health rould permit. Such is my regard for temperance I have not the slightest recollection of ever having been intoxicated, to which I attribute length of days, and the ability of attending to business.
